STROUP GETS WRIT AGAINST COUNTY COMMISSIONERS

Board Ordered to Show Why it Shouldn't Turn Delinquent Taxes Into Road and School Funds.

Judge Herbert F. Reynolds in the district court today issued an order requiring the board of county commissioners to show cause why money in hand collected for delinquent taxes of years prior to 1911 should not be turned into the county road and school funds. The order was secured by A. B. Stroup, one of the most active leaders in the good roads movement in this section. It is returnable August 26. On August 3 Mr. Stroup petitioned the commissioners to appportion the money, amounting to about $1,300. He cited the statute which requires that such money be appportioned to the road and school funds, if no valid outstanding indebtedness against the county exists. The division of the sum between the two funds lies in the discretion of the board.

Mr. Stroup's petition was denied on the ground that there is outstanding indebtedness. Mr. Stroup lost no time in preparing to bring the matter before the court, and today's writ was the result. According to the application for a writ filed by Mr. Stroup the claims before the board full to show an indebtedness interfering with the distribution of the money under the law cited.

DUTCH RESERVISTS PASS THROUGH ON THEIR WAY EAST

Twenty reservists of the Dutch army on their way back to Holland were passengers aboard the eastern express this afternoon. They were mostly from San Francisco, where the Dutch consul arranged their passage to New York.

The reservists were all young men, sturdy and well set up, and they were bubbling over with patriotic enthusiasm. They marched from the train to the lunch room in a body, led by a young fellow carrying a big Dutch flag, above which streamed an orange pennant. Little Dutch flags were pinned on the lapels of the reservists, and most of them wore little American flags as conspicuously as the Dutch tricolor.

SMITH GETS HIS DIVORCE; PROPERTY DIVISION STANDS

J. C. Smith was awarded a decree of absolute divorce today from Bertha I. Smith and was given custody of their two children, Augusta, aged 9, and Gladys, aged 4. The ground for the decree is desertion. Mrs. Smith, in her reply to the complaint, averred that a division of property entered into between her husband and herself before she left him was obtained by trickery, and asked that it be set aside. The court confirmed the division. Mrs. Smith left her husband last month. Smith's lawyer was A. B. Stroup.

The petition of Dolores Otero de Burg for a reduction in the assessment against her property for 1912 was denied by Judge Reynolds.

UNIVERSITY WILL OPEN WEEK FROM MONDAY

Early Beginning Will Make for Convenience in Midyear Semester. Large attendance Sure.

The University of New Mexico will open for the 1914-1915 session a week from next Monday, August 17th, according to announcement made this afternoon by President David Ross Boyd. The early beginning is a return to former custom and is likely to prove more satisfactory, Dr. Boyd believes, because it will bring the close of the first semester before the Christmas holidays and make it possible to begin the second semester with the New Year.

"Every indication we have points to a very successful year ahead," said Dr. Boyd this afternoon. "I have covered the state thoroughly and we are assured of the largest attendance in the history of the university, and a very considerable increase of New Mexico students over last year. Faculty is complete and ready for the beginning of work and we feel sure that our whole work during the coming year will be upon a more satisfactory basis than ever before."

HOGCHOLERA SHOWS UP AT THE STATE COLLEGE FARM

Result is an Investigation and Warning to Farmers of the State to Look Out for disease. Its Causes and Cure.

State College, N. M., Aug. 7.—Hog cholera recently appeared among the hogs of the College farm, and it seems well to warn farmers to be on the lookout for its appearance among their hogs. During the past year the college has received a number of reports of hogs in different parts of the state being infected with this disease, but so far as is known, the attacks have been local and have not spread to any extent.

Upon the appearance of the disease among the college hogs they were immediately vaccinated with hog cholera serum and the necessary precautions were taken to prevent its spread from this source.

Cause.—Hog cholera is an infectious disease, caused by an ultra-invisible organism, the exact nature of which is not known. The organisms are taken into the body through the food or water, and the time elapsing between the exposure of an animal to the disease and the development of noticeable symptoms varies from a few days to three weeks.

How Spread.—This disease is very easily spread. It is most frequently introduced into a herd by infected hogs which are purchased but do not show symptoms of the disease at the time of entrance into the herd. Shipping hogs in infected cars or keeping them in infected pens will also cause the disease. The germs may be carried by dogs or coyotes which have eaten a diseased carcass, by birds which have fed in infected pens, or by persons who have walked through pens where diseased hogs have been. It is also believed by some authorities that the disease is sometimes spread through feeding hogs garbage containing uncooked bacon rinds.

How Prevented.—In case hogs have been exposed to this disease, the only known preventative is the use of hog cholera serum, which is injected into the tissues of the animal with a hypodermic syringe. This will render hogs immune. There is no cure for hogs which have become sick. They must be treated before they show a fever, for the serum to be of any use. More detailed information in regard to the serum treatment may be secured from the literature mentioned below.

Symptoms.—The symptoms of hog cholera are not claimed to be specific or constant, but any or all of the following are apt to be seen when a number of hogs are sick with the disease, and they indicate with a degree of certainty the presence of the disease: loss of appetite; constipation, followed by diarrhea; marked weakness; staggering gait; labored breathing; convulsions; discharge from eyes and nose; reddish spots on the belly; and a tendency to lie around or stand with the back humped.

Post Mortem Examination.—While the above symptoms indicate the disease, the only sure means of determining whether hog cholera is present is to examine the internal organs of a hog which has just died. The indications of cholera are small red spots on the skin of the abdomen, pinching of body cavities, on the intestines, kidney and lungs. The lymphatic glands, as the mesenteric, submaxillary, mesenteric, etc., are usually inflamed and enlarged. In chronic cases there may be ulcers on the lining of the small and large intestines and on the mesenteric membranes. The spleen may be enlarged and soft and the lungs may show inflamed and solid appearing portions.

Precautions.—Keep hogs under strictly sanitary conditions. The pens and troughs must be cleaned and disinfected frequently, and no wallow holes allowed to remain. Do not have hog pens near public highways.

If hogs are purchased from other herds they should be quarantined for three weeks, to ascertain whether they are free from disease.

The lots should be fenced with closely woven wire, so as to exclude dogs or coyotes which would otherwise be crossing the lots. If the disease is present in your community, do not allow neighbors or strangers to enter the hog lots.

If the disease appears in your or neighboring herds, it is well to procure serum and vaccinate all well hogs immediately. Read and become well informed on the subject of hog cholera.

Disposal of Carcasses.—If an animal dies, do not bury it or throw it on waste land. It should be burned. This is easily done, if thrown on a pile of wood and covered with kerosene.

Literature.—Bulletins treating the subject of hog cholera in detail may be obtained free from the experiment stations of the following states: Indiana, at La Fayette, Ind.; Arkansas, at Fayetteville, Ark.; South Dakota, at Brookings, S. D.; Texas, at College Station, Texas; Nebraska, at Lincoln, Neb.; Kansas at Manhattan, Kan.; and Minnesota, at St. Anthony Park, St. Paul, Minn.

Where to Secure Serum.—Reliable serum may be obtained from the Stock Yards Serum company, Kansas City, Kansas; Continental Serum company, St. Louis, Mo.; or Huehner Serum company, Kansas City, Mo. W. S. CUNNINGHAM, Assistant in Animal Industry.

BUSINESS COLLEGE ITEMS

Students are working diligently for the summer finals that will be held the latter part of the month, before the fall term opens on September 8th.

Though the opening of the fall term is still four weeks off, inquiries in large numbers are pouring in through the mails and from the city every day. There is no doubt that the registration will be large, and representative of the whole south-west.

Mr. Clarence Bickendorf, familiarly known as "Blick," has accepted a position with the Continental Oil company.

Mr. H. C. Jones, who was with the Bank of Magdalena, temporarily, reports that he likes his new position with the Hilton Mercantile company very well.

Seven students are working diligently for civil service examination which will be held Saturday, the 15th. A. B. C. graduates are already numerous in government service but the number is increasing right along.

Mr. Van Olson who has been employed as bookkeeper for E. H. Hildebrand of Santa Fe since completing his course, will return to Albuquerque on the 15th to accept a position with the Continental Oil company. Two other A. B. C. boys are now with this firm.

The United States forestry service has occupied the offices on the second floor, formerly used by the city. Students are working diligently for the summer final that will be held the latter part.
